

Hand print bonfire

Here we used a cardboard box for the wood, however you could get the children to paint the wood, rip card up or find some sticks to use.

Using different textures in early years art is beneficial because it provides rich sensory experiences that aid in cognitive, motor, and language development. It allows children to explore and understand their world through touch, expand their vocabulary related to texture, and develop fine motor skills.

